CORONER HOMEYER.

When the Coroner got up this morning he hurried over to the little Morgue with so much haste that bystanders were led to believe he was fearful the corpse itself might have disappeared during the night tegether with all other clues, but if the Coroner had any such fears they were quickly dispelled when he opened the Morgue door.

The body was still there and had not been disturbed. The Coroner heaved a big sigh of relief and announced that there were no new developments and that he would "start all

THE CORONER IS ANORY. Mr. Homeyer was evidently not in good humor. He was still angry at the way he had been treated by Identifier No. 2, who told him yesterday that he was Charles Reed, of Darien, Conn., that he danced with the girl two years ago at Savin, Rock, near New Haven, where Jennie Cramer met her tragic death, and that he had seen the man " Aabe " with the now dead girl on the Brooklyn Bridge Saturday evening and the man alone at Rockaway Beach on Sunday.

The Coroner took Reed to Rockaway, and
